The Forest of Arden is the place to which Rosalind and Celia and Orlando all escape in As You Like It. It is also a place of banishment that ends up being a blessing in disguise. It’s an escape from the world where people mistreat each other. The stage that we’ve built on top of our stage here in this theatre is a place where life is different than it is off it. It’s a place of escape, yes, and also a place where life is not unexamined. It turns out it’s a place where people can be someone else and at the same time perhaps figure out who they are. It’s an escape from 2014, but it’s definitely not 1599 either. Though that’s when Shakespeare first produced the play, tonight’s As You Like It takes place...well...whenever and wherever you like it; to wherever and whenever it is you would like to escape.
